Compliance with applicable laws and this Code of Conduct

Suppliers shall, always, comply with laws and regulations applicable to their business and this Supplier Code of Conduct. Suppliers shall ensure that their subcontractors comply with the principles described in this Supplier Code of Conduct.

Respect for people is a core value for Aliaxis. We adhere to the principles of the International Labor Organization conventions and expect our suppliers to respect the human rights of their workforce and treat them fairly in accordance with all applicable laws.

Freedom of association	Suppliers shall recognize the freedom of association, meaning the right of workers and employers to freely form or join organizations that promote and defend their interests at work, without interference without any type of repressive action and the right to collective bargaining, meaning the right to a voluntary process through which the Supplier and unions (or workers' representatives) negotiate their relations and interaction at the workplace.
No forced or compulsory labor nor modern slavery	Suppliers shall not use forced or compulsory labor or modern slavery. This means any work or service exacted under menace of any penalty to which a person has not offered himself voluntarily.
No child labor	Suppliers shall not employ children under the age of 15, unless the local law is more stringent, in which case the local higher age limit applies.
No discrimination	Suppliers shall not discriminate based on gender, race, color, religion, ethnic or national origin, sexual orientation, age, disability, union or political membership, family status, or any other classification protected by law.

Such wages must be paid with an agreed regularity (daily, weekly or monthly). The maximum legally allowed working hours must not be exceeded. Where a country does not have such a maximum, Aliaxis requests that Supplier ensures such maximum does not exceed sixty hours per week.

Workplace Health, Safety and Impact on Environment

Our commitment to sustainability includes safe and healthy workplaces, respect for the environment and efficient use of resources. Aliaxis encourages suppliers to take action against climate change, to avoid the use of environmentally hazardous materials and to engage in activities that increase material circularity like reuse and recycling.

Workplace safety	Based on prevailing industry standards, Suppliers shall provide and maintain a safe, clean, and healthy workplace.
